Senate Is

Its Own Master

Roadside Scene

When President Truman advised the United States Senate yesterday to break up the Southern filibuster against the proposed rules change, by ordering a simple majority vote, even Senator Lucas (Dem., Ill.), the administration leader, said:

"I am compelled to disagree with my chief."

The filibuster, then in its fourth day, was immeasurably strengthened by the executive department's unfortunate venture into the realm of the legislative. The reason is not hard to find.

When the president sends messages to congress concerning legislation he is on sound constitutional ground. But when he ventures to tell senators not only what bills to pass but how they shall handle the debate on said bills he makes the senators feel like a reporter who, ordered to write a story, finds the editor breathing down his neck, dotting every "i" and crossing every "t" as the story gets itself written.

Human nature is the same, whether you are Mr. John Citizen or a United States Senator — and the most powerful political chamber on earth inevitably drops legislation to defend the right to continue to be its own master. In these days you can well understand that — regardless of what the actual legislative issue is, or what particular section of the country happens to be affected.

The Senate figures it will be here long after current issues have evaporated into history — and it aims to retain its original form and its constitutional powers no matter what happens to the legislative matters before it.

* * * On U. S. 67 I saw this:

A battered old car chugging up the road, with the following inscription chalked across its back: "California or Bust — and Don't Near Bust!"

And the driver wasn't kidding, either. For he was headed the other way — East.

Veteran Admits Slaying

New Orleans, March 4 — (UP) — Louis Eugene Hoover was to be told today how — according to his own story — he killed Millionaire James A. Mahoney in a New Orleans hotel room ten days ago.

Police planned to confront him with a confession made under the influence of a "truth serum," administered at Hoover's own request.

Acting Superintendent of Police Joseph Scheuring indicated that the story left no loose ends. Predicted dining with the wealthy Bristol, previously Hoover, 25, had admitted dining with the wealthy Bristol, Va., man and going to his hotel room. A hotel employee identified him as a sweater-clad man who was seen outside Mahoney's door.

And the tale told in a hospital room late yesterday, in a three-hour session with doctors and detectives, cleared up what happened inside the room. Hoover had said "I wish I knew myself ... I want to get this straightened out."

Scheuring said he again told how he and Mahoney met on a street on Feb. 21, had dinner together and went to the hotel room about midnight. Mahoney was to leave a few hours later for a Central American vacation.

Then the injection of sodium pentothal brought out new material. The former service man from Louisville, Ky., said he showed up, and he and Mahoney lay on the bed while "he offered to put me up in a hotel, and leave me money for meals while he went on a short business trip."

But Hoover objected, he said, that he was a married man and his wife would not approve. He said that Mahoney then called his wife "bad name."

"It made me mad," the purported confession said. "I got off the bed to dress and leave the room. But Mahoney grabbed my arm, and tried to keep me there. I flew into a rage and started hitting him, panted him, and panted him. Then I got a hammerlock on his head."

Hoover was arrested Monday while still wearing the striped sweater which Ben Campbell, a hotel watchman, had noticed.

Unemployment in U. S. Hits Postwar High

Washington, March 4 — (UP) — The nation's unemployed rose to a postwar high of 3,221,000 in February, the census bureau reported today.

It was an increase of 550,000 over January, and an increase of $250,000 since the first of the year.

The census bureau estimated that the number of unemployed Americans in February was 600,000 higher than the same month of last year.

The last time unemployment had been this high was in March, 1942, when it stood at 3,580,000. It then began a steady decline toward wartime lows.

There were 57,168,000 Americans employed in February, compared with 57,414,000 in January. In February 1948, it was 57,139,000.

The bureau said the increase in unemployment was "caused in part by bad weather in certain sections of the country and by other seasonal developments. However, a continuation of the non-seasonal layoffs noted last month probably accounted for a large part of the change."

Yesterday, President Truman gave his own opinion of the nation's economic picture. He said the nation's economy is going up and down at the same time.

He said he wants the government to use its power to put a roof over the upward spiral and a floor on the downward trend.

The bureau said, however, that unemployment in February was still "low relative to prewar levels" despite the substantial increases.

In 1941, unemployment averaged 5,500,000 with one person in every 10 in the civilian labor force out of work. The ratio last month was one in 20.

The total civilian labor force in February was set at 60,388,000 compared with 60,078,000 in January and 59,778,000 in February 1948. The difference in the sizes of the labor forces accounts for the apparent disparity in the number of employed in February of this year as compared to last year.

Farm employment ran counter to the national trend last month and showed a seasonal increase from January's figure of 6,763,000 to 6,993,000.

In his review yesterday of the economic situation, Mr. Truman said government regulation of installment buying is a commonsense way to stabilize the national economy.

— In my opinion," said Taft, "this was the most high-handed procedure he has seen since I have been a member of the senate."

Taft said the Democrats refused to consider at all any bill proposed by the Republicans.

Taft told a news conference that he attempted to offer an amendment which would retain the Taft-Hartley law provision which requires union officers to sign non-Communist affidavits.

He said Senator Elbert D. Thomas (D-Utah), the committee chairman, ruled him out of order.

Senator Morse (R-Ore.) said he attempted to offer an amendment dealing with the handling of critical items and was likewise ruled out of order.

"In my opinion," said Taft, "this was the most high-handed procedure in any committee since I have been a member of the senate."

The committee procedure also was denounced by Senators Aiken (Vt.), Donnell (Mo.) and Smith (N.J.) Republicans. It was defended by Thomas and Senator Pepper (D-Fla.).

Thomas said that if the procedure was highhanded, it was "necessarily so." He said the country is "waiting for action" on the bill to get rid of the Taft-Hartley law.

All 4-H Club members are urged to listen to this broadcast.

Truman's Labor Bill Voted by Senate Group

Washington, March 4 — (AP) — The Senate labor committee voted to approve the Truman labor bill without change by a vote of 8 to 5. The bill would repeal the Taft-Hartley law and substitute the old Wagner Labor Relations act with modifications.

All the votes for the bill were cast by Democrats. All Republicans on the committee voted against it.

The vote at this time was taken over bitter Republican protests that further study should be given the measure.

Senator Taft (R-Ohio), the ranking minority member, declared the forced vote was the "most high-handed" procedure he has seen since he has been in the senate.

Taft said the Democrats refused to consider at all any bill proposed by the Republicans.

Taft told a news conference that he attempted to offer an amendment which would retain the Taft-Hartley law provision which requires union officers to sign non-Communist affidavits.

He said Senator Elbert D. Thomas (D-Utah), the committee chairman, ruled him out of order.

'Ike' Asks Unification Act Revision

New York, March 4 — (AP) — Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower was called for a revision of the armed forces unification act to give the secretary of defense more authority over the three services—the army, navy and air force.

He said last night that plans for an effective unified armed forces law have been opposed by an entrenched bureaucracy who felt that if a civilian watched over their activities they would lose those vested rights that were so precious to them.

Eisenhower is on leave as president of Columbia University to head ranks of the joint chiefs of staff.

Speaking before the New York City Bar Association, he said the present unification law was couched in "wishy-washy" terms.

While it does not make unification impossible, he said, it "certainly makes it difficult."

"The civilian in charge of the unified services," he said, "was not given full authority to accomplish what he wished to be done, and even sound technical advice was denied him."

With Richard Bruner as assistant business manager, the business committee consists of the following juniors: Norma Morrison, Adrienne Peeton, Jimmy Ponder, and Janice Brunley.

Eisenhower said he thinks a $15,000,000 military budget is not excessive under present world conditions. But he criticized what he termed a tendency to view the international situation with "doubt, fear and even hysteria."

"Let us look on our problems like a man who knows he is strong no matter how humble he may be," he said.

More Power for New Defense Secretary Likely

Washington, March 4 — (AP) — Louis A. Johnson, picked to head the quarrelsome military establishment, may be handed more authority than his predecessor had.

President Truman, who announced yesterday that Johnson will replace Secretary of Defense Forrestal at the end of this month, is expected to ask congress to give more power to the new defense chief.

Johnson, 58-year old West Virginian, has served in the past as assistant secretary of war. His career includes a term as national commander of the American Legion, years of practicing law, and experience as a money raiser in Mr. Truman's election campaign last year.

A more powerful secretary of defense was the main theme of the Hoover commission's recent report on reorganization of the department of defense. Forrestal had made similar proposals in the past.

Mr. Truman told his news conference yesterday he thought all the recommendations offered by the commission—which is headed by former President Herbert Hoover—were very good.

The president named no specific points, but he did say he planned to let congress know his ideas on the matter in a few days.

Senators who must confirm Johnson's nomination expressed regret at the retirement of Forrestal but gave no indication of any opposition to his successor. Democrats generally applauded the appointment.

Forrestal's retirement has long been expected. Mr. Truman said he finally agreed to it, with reluctance. Forrestal was the last holdover from the Franklin D. Roosevelt cabinet.

Johnson, who saw action as an infantry officer in World War I, was on close terms with the army, but at the same time fought for building up a long range bomber force.

And he was a close friend of his opposite in the navy, assistant Secretary Charles Edison, with whom he conferred often.

Johnson was in charge of procurement as the stage was set for war in Europe and as the conflict began.

He was instrumental in pushing through congress the first $13,000,000 in "educational orders" to manufacturers to help build up defense preparedness. He urged expanded manufacture of the machine tools needed for armament.

His associates recall him as a zealot for preparedness, who toured every state in the union making speeches toward that end.

Plan New Life After Threat to End It

Houston, Tex., March 4. —(UP)—Chris J. Christensen, 46-year-old San Francisco city supervisor, was planning a new life today with his pretty wife, Juanita, who thought he jumped to his death from Golden Gate bridge more than a year ago.

The Christensens kept to their double hotel room, apparently discussing plans for the future of themselves and their two children.

Christensen told authorities here that he preferred to remain in Houston rather than face the "condescension" of well-meaning friends in San Francisco.

His wife collapsed in the hotel lobby when they held a ten-year reunion last night.

Mrs. Christensen was supposed to have met her husband in the hotel room but he crossed up the plane. His anxiety to greet her as she entered the hotel through a side door, he left the room and appeared in the lobby in neat sports clothes.

Mrs. Christensen stared and shook her head, then took several running steps to meet him. They fell into each other's arms and embraced tenderly, whispering to each other all the while.

A few seconds later, Mrs. Christensen collapsed, sobbing from the shoulder of a reporter. She recovered quickly, however, and clung to her husband as they moved toward the elevator.

She was accompanied here by three reporters from San Francisco newspaper which paid for her flight. The San Francisco reporters kept other press and radio representatives from interviewing the couple on grounds of "protecting the paper's $2,500 interest."

Christensen was discovered here this week after he applied for a job and a check of references showed he was the same man who disappeared in San Francisco 13 months ago.

He just had been elected city supervisor when police found his suit coat and a suicide note on the Golden Gate bridge on Jan. 14, 1948.

He told authorities that he suffered a "lapse of memory" due to mental pressure resulting from "machine politics." He remembered walking out on the bridge and was convinced that he actually did jump but could not remember clearly.

With his identity lost to himself, he found odd jobs in Los Angeles and in Arizona before winding up here a few days ago. His memory returned gradually in the meantime, and he used his true name when he applied for work here this week. It was then that his family and San Francisco officials learned that he still was alive.

APL Allowed to Finance Construction

Washington, March 4.—(UPI)—The Securities and Exchange Commission has authorized Arkansas Power and Light company, Pine Bluff, Ark., to modify its corporate structure to allow additional financing to pay costs of new construction. Under the plan A. P. and L. will increase its common stock from 2,000,000 to 3,000,000 shares and will also increase its unsecured indebtedness.

Players from the Philadelphia Eagles led the National Football League in running, passing and kicking during the 1948 season.

sided over the business session. The Salute to the Confederate Flag was led by Mrs. H. J. F. Garrett. The minutes of the last meeting were read by the secretary, Mrs. Pat Casey and were approved. Mrs. Slusser gave excerpts from an article taken from the U.D.C. magazine written by the President General of the U.D.C., Mrs. John Weinmann.

Mrs. W. W. Duckett, honorary State President, presented Mrs. Slusser with the U.D.C. pen that belonged to the late Mrs. Foy Smith. Mrs. Slusser gave a tribute to Mrs. Smith, who organized the Pat Cleburne Chapter, 53 years ago.

Mrs. A. G. Rives, program chairman presented Mrs. P. L. Perkins, who gave an interesting book review, "Tomorrow Will Be Better" by Betty Smith.

During the social hour, the hostesses served a dessert course with coffee and salted nuts to 32 members and four guests, Mrs. Sid Hendry, Mrs. Wm. P. Hardege, Mrs. P. L. Perkins and Mrs. Van Hook.
